Some day we shall look back on our lives and marvel that we ever knew someone as evil as Hitler. It is hard to imagine now, but in the mid 19th century, people were so astonished to see a tyrant rise to power in their very midst that they could not believe that such a thing was possible. At first, the mightiest and richest nation in the world had little choice but to let its shock overwhelm its spirit. Its people were far too stunned to take any sort of active measures against him, but the next generation was not to know such a thing. Today, of course, the world is very different. Like it or not, we live in a world where evil can be done and happens by people who look like us. It is simply inconceivable to think that a few years back, people would have guessed that someone like Adolf Hitler, or even Mao Tse Tung, could have achieved power and even ruled an empire for so long without anyone inside the country or outside it doing anything about it. But it happened. This new book will bring us back to that time, and help us remember it in a way that we have never remembered it before. We begin by visiting with the British historian, David Irving, who is still able to turn out new books about his old man of state, and the rest of the people involved with Adolf Hitler. It is hard for him to get a hearing on TV, because he is so "out of fashion" by now, but they still find room on radio and in the press for him, and he is always willing to sit for an interview. We meet with Jack Maney, an American who is, without question, the
