I'm trying to make a menu for a game in Unity. I want the menu to look like this. I don't know how to get the 'L' shape. I have tried using several different type of layout options but I can't seem to get it to work. Can someone please help me? A: for a simple implementation like this, you can use a simple plane with a Box Collider. Then in the inspector you can edit the spacing with an object space component, its not exact. A: If you don't want to use an object with a box collider, you can use the Plane object. However, note that it's not animated, but you can make it so using an Animation and a texture map. Add an Animation object to the scene with one frame. The property frame should be set to {0, 1, 2} (0 being the first frame). Then add a texture map to the plane and set the "receive" of the box collider to "Plane". That will have the effect of animating the box collider from a single point to the plane. If you want the animation to be animated in a circular motion, you can use the animation again and select "Circle". That will animate the animation in a circular motion. To get that circular motion, you can select a single frame from the animation, with frame={0, 1, 2} and rotate it 90 degrees. Then select a single frame from that animation, with frame={0, 1, 2} again and drag it into the box collider as a texture map. That will set the texture map to the box collider, and after that point the box collider will have a box shape, not a plane shape.
