More particularly, the invention is directed to transmitting data signals with a frequency-hopping transmission technology. 2. Description of the Prior Art In the field of mobile radio communications, several methods of transmitting data to the base stations of the transceivers are known. In such a case, data signals are sent from each transceiver to the base station, in which the base station processes them and forwards them to the other transceiver. In addition to that, methods for sending data from the base station to the transceivers are also known. A drawback of the known methods is that there are large communication bandwidths required to send the required amount of data. The object of the invention is to propose a method of transmitting data signals which is more flexible and consumes less bandwidth than the above-described methods. In accordance with the invention, a method of transmitting data signals is provided in which data signals from a plurality of transceivers are formed into data signal groups of a predefined size. The data signal groups are provided to a controller which selects data signal groups from data signal groups received from the plurality of transceivers in accordance with a predefined criterion. The selected data signal groups are respectively transmitted to the transceivers and data signals are sent back by the transceivers to the
