At the heart of FIFA is the Tactical Free-Kicks, or "Foul" system. Players are given three "Foul" scenarios at set points within the game: Free-Kick to opponent's right One of two Free-Kicks in a shooting position (ball on left or right foot) Defender holding ball in the air (from defending team) FIFA teaches each player how to unlock three "Foul" scenarios at set points within the game: Free-Kick to opponent's right One of two Free-Kicks in a shooting position (ball on left or right foot) Defender holding ball in the air (from defending team) When a player performs a "Foul" scenario, the other team gains a "Free-Kick" where they can attempt to convert that into an opportunity. The first player to score converts the score and earns an attempt at a "Point". Consecutive successful Fouls, when a player continually earns a Foul on the ball, are the basis of "Penalty" scenarios within the game, and these are the most important part of "FIFA 22". The closer you are to the opposing goal, the more difficult it is to score. FIFA is about being a "threat" but it's also about being clever. In some situations, you can flick the ball away, the next time you're challenged, or from a similar position, you can set up a "Pushing" or "Holding" scenario. "Foul" scenarios are based around being "Threatened" in open play and "Distracted" from set pieces. Teams are made up of 11 players (increasing to 13 for Pro Clubs) and teams are not full strength. That means some players are smarter than others, and you will have to figure out which team is better at converting "Foul" scenarios into actual opportunities, and at what point. Opponents can be instructed to switch off certain players in favour of more intelligent coverage. Players can score from "Cutting-Inside," or when they "Cut-Inside" in a shooting position, or from a "Holding" or "Pushing" scenario. Scoring is essential and the "Yellow
