The distribution of somatostatin and beta-endorphin-like immunoreactive nerve fibres in the human nucleus of the solitary tract was studied by use of the peroxidase-antiperoxidase technique. Varicose and thin varicose nerve fibres showing immunoreactivity to both the two peptides were found in the nucleus in close spatial relationship with the perikarya and dendrites of the neurons containing catecholamine and acetylcholinesterase positive nerve fibres. The perikarya and some dendrites of the medullary neurones were also immunostained for both peptides. However, this immunoreactivity did not coincide with the neuropeptides."
