The Last Hope on Earth is a multiplayer third person survival/sandbox game. Hey guys! Back with another new content update on the game. Hope you guys enjoy this one. So here it is, the new update/expansion. We were thinking a lot about the game, and we also wanted to have a serious update but also something fun and enjoyable to enjoy it with. We just changed some things around in the engine and the level editor. And also the way you guys can build stuff with the level editor. So yeah, those who liked it... they love it! It is a rather big update/expansion actually. We have added a new theme, we added the new maps as you guys know from the previous couple of videos. And we've also added some structures to the map. And we added the Vehicle editor. The Vehicle editor is a sub system of the game. If you guys don't want to play online, this is also a thing you can use. We have also added a public chat window that we've made a prototype of. And we added a new log window as you guys already know. We added several new features in the new update/expansion and I think we've done a lot of things and we think we've improved a lot the game, because we think it is really fun to play. We also added a lot of bug fixes as well, so we do hope you like it. We have added two new vehicles. We've also added a new weapon type. So those are new weapons you can use that we don't see in the previous video. We have two new maps. The Vehicle editor is also on the test server now so you guys can play around with it, and you can build what you want in the game and you can also try out the new features as well. The public chat window, the log window, and the in game log window I added some new features in there as well but you know how I'm with my logic, so it is quite easy to log things out. I changed the game a little bit so I think it is not that hard to understand. And we have some new stuff in the game as well. The first one was the new theme we've added. And the second one is the we've added

What's new:

. The Earth absorbs the Moon's rays by reflection: the heat there is quite different from that produced by the Sun, and that which is there separated by a far-reaching interval we call day. The latter supports terrestrial vegetative life; the former nourishes the vegetable foodstuff that lives farther under ground. (1) [In the tertiary period of geology, the second, also called 'early', and the two following periods we shall refer to as the 'quaternary', or 'secondary', and the 'quinary' or 'tertiary' periods. In the tertiary the Earth has again reached its ancient condition again, and no change has taken place in this epoch. The continents, which during the earlier time had all been in the centre, during the latter periods again have again their original nature. The atmosphere has spread itself over the continents with the same omnipresence it had during the times (of the early secondary period). Plants, animals, as well as man, continue to be thus supported on Earth by the sun; this however, is in them only a transitory condition. The Earth will have a different relation to Jupiter at the close of this period, the month 'Astraea' will be over for it. As in the quinquenary period, the Earth experiences in the tertiary, also called 'early', period, no change of condition, it is therefore during this period also the same in kind, that is, it supports life on its surface; which is different from what it experienced in the earlier periods where Jupiter was in conjunction with the Earth. Animals and mankind however are in this period in a transitory state, which will be interrupted when the first configuration of Jupiter has been completed. In the quinary period, Jupiter is again alone as in the early, and the Moon follows behind, together with the other planets in their orbits around Jupiter. But in this epoch the latter are quite different from the condition they were in for so long, when they were in such a close connexion with the Moon. This connexion is then still there, but they with the other planets have a much greater distance from the Earth, so that it has not the same climate as at first, nor does it support life by its reflection. The rainfall and the rivers then begin to run from the Earth in a different form, and in the aqueous part of the world there are soon seas, seas and oceans. But there
