For a first look at what this technology brings in an actual game, we asked Team Vitality's coach Benoit "sony" Charrette and Top 1.6 player Jean-Charles "slasie" Maloire to play Fifa 22 Activation Code with HyperMotion Technology on display in this video preview. Let's start with you, Sony, what can you tell us about the new Team Vitality roster, what's the mood on the team? Sony: Our main goal is to qualify for ESL One Cologne, and we know that it's impossible to do it as a stand-in. With this roster, we should have a pretty good chance to qualify, but we are focusing on doing well at IEM Katowice and then at ESL One Cologne, where we have a really tough draw. We have slightly changed our team, as it's impossible to have 16 players in the team. With these changes, we've built a new tactical line-up, but we're still building towards ESL One Cologne. How will the team play, do you have any preferences for certain roles? Sony: As a four-man core, we're a tactics-driven team, and our main emphasis is to limit mistakes and play smart. Our main roles are: the CT-side players who have to bring good entry frags, be aggressive on A, control the map and look for options when we go for a retake. On the other side, it's our AWP'er and entry fragger, he needs to be aggressive in the early rounds and look for openings. I would say that our two main roles are CT-side and entry on the AWP. Is there any specific challenge you face as a coach in your preparation for a new role? Sony: The biggest challenge is to recognize that not everything you thought about the team before will happen again. How do you change your mindsets and focus on certain details? Our communication has changed a bit, we are also more passive in the past. With that said, what you do right will pay off and what you don't do will annoy you a lot, so you have to continue trying different things. As coach, it's important that you build a very good working relationship with the players, so that they know what you expect of them

A: It turns into a blackbody sphere (a sphere that emits the same frequency of thermal radiation as the surrounding blackbody), and the electrons in the paper are confined.
