Q: How to get the time by using PHP? Hi I'm developing an application that records each user's activity. I need the current time. How to get this? I used PHP's time() function, but it returns current UTC time. I can't do my task effectively. Please help me. A: With PHP 5.3, you could use time() and gmtime() for that: $now = gmdate('Y-m-d H:i:s'); It will return the current UNIX timestamp, in the form Y-m-d H:i:s or something like Y-m-d. Otherwise you could use the time function: $now = time(); The latter will return the time in seconds since the Unix Epoch, in the form

int number. This will be different for you if you're using a PHP version earlier than 5.3. The time() function will return the same time in seconds regardless of the version, but the gmtime() and time() functions changed in different ways for different versions of PHP.
