article: stem cell therapy in colorectal cancer. The search for a cure for colorectal cancer has focussed on localised disease. Until the late 1990s there was no accepted standard therapeutic treatment for advanced disease. More recently, a number of chemotherapeutic agents have been shown to be effective in the treatment of advanced disease and are included in the adjuvant treatment of Stage III disease. In addition, recent advances in the understanding of the biology of colorectal cancer have led to the identification of new treatments which promise to improve cure rates and extend survival. These include the use of chemotherapeutic drugs, radiation and surgery in combination with emerging biological therapies. Stem cell therapy has become the subject of much interest, with hope that a variety of sources of stem cells may represent the future of cancer therapeutics.[School based smoking prevention programme in the Netherlands]. To assess the effectiveness of school-based smoking prevention programmes in the Netherlands. Randomized controlled trial. Schools with 30 pupils or more per class (n = 133) and schools with 25-29 pupils per class (n = 104) in the Netherlands. Type of programme: a 5-h long programme was implemented in 104 schools with 25-29 pupils. An 8-h program was used in 81 schools with 30 or more pupils. Controls: 131 schools, which did not undergo intervention were assigned to the control group. Smoking prevention knowledge and attitudes in adolescence. Knowledge of the five harm categories was defined as correct identification on at least one harmful substance. The proportion of correct identification of the harmful substances was higher in the intervention group (30.3%, 95% CI 28.6-32.0) than in the control group (23.0%, 95% CI 21.4-24.6).

The strength of the effect was large, $d = 0.85$. Modelling the programme on adolescent smoking behaviour in the Netherlands showed that at the critical time of the fourth year of secondary school, the programme had a significant effect on the intention to smoke (OR 0.71, 95% CI 0.54-0.94). The effects of the programme on other variables were less clear-cut and were not
