The Power of a Positive Mind

The article 'The Power of a Positive Mind' appeared in Power-Realization Magazine, Vol 9, No 1, Spring 2006

Story highlights

If you ask a conventional doctor what they'd do first if someone came to them and said that they wanted to destroy the rest of their life by blowing up their heart or making themselves blind, they'd probably send you to a psychologist. Why would a conventional doctor send you to a psychologist? Because they don't believe that we have power to destroy our own lives. They don't believe that we can kill ourselves by our own hand. When you begin to understand this lesson, you begin to see the power of a positive mind. This is a subject where no one has the answer, and we all get to the wrong place in life. So the first thing you can do is learn how to get a better place, and the second thing you can do is learn how to give yourself power. And once you do that, you'll probably make a lot of mistakes, but you'll probably make less mistakes than you would if you stayed where you are. We all get hurt in life, we all get sick, we all get treated unfairly, we all get rejected, we all get poor, we all get poor-hearted, we all get lonely, we all get scared, we all get lost, we all get confused, we all get mentally defeated, we all get down and depressed. If you're going to heal the mind, you have to learn to heal yourself. When you learn to do that, you're really on your way, because the more you know about yourself, the more you want to take care of your own self. You find out that you have a mind that knows so much; if you want to be healed, you have to take care of that mind. What are the symptoms of a negative mind? Well, the first thing is you're afraid to make any changes in your life, because you have this massive fear of failure. Secondly, you just believe that you can't get better because you've been hurt so many times. And thirdly, you just believe you're worthless because
