Halobacterium salinarum NRC-1 is the only halophilic bacterium isolated from saline environments that utilizes NaCl as its main source of KCl. In this work the adaptation of the cells to high salinity was investigated. The responses of the cells to increasing NaCl concentrations were measured using the range of salinities accessible in the growth medium. The adaptation of the cells to salinity was shown to be accomplished by the ability of cells to concentrate Cl- in the cytoplasm, as measured using a Cl- -selective microelectrode. The intracellular [Cl-] regulation was characterized in detail and shown to be common in the cells adapted to NaCl. An increase of the apparent maximum uptake velocity of Cl- from 0.77 to 2.7 mumol g(dry cell) (-1) min(-1) and an increase of the apparent affinity for Cl- of about three orders of magnitude were found. Furthermore, vacuolar H+-ATPase was shown to be an important component in the adaptation mechanism of H. salinarum cells to high salinity. These results suggest that the cells adapt to high salinity by accumulating Cl- in the vacuoles and by inactivating the H+-ATPase, which should enable the cell to maintain intracellular Cl- at a concentration close to the bulk extracellular concentration.# YAML support for the Go language Introduction ----- The yaml package enables Go programs to comfortably encode and decode YAML values. Does anyone know if this is possible and if so how. I did a lot of research and couldn't come up with a solution. A: Printers typically don't have anything to do with what platform a device is using. What OS is being used is the only factor determining whether it can print to a printer. Windows 7 and later PCs have a security feature that will only allow applications you have specifically approved to print. A randomized, double-blind, controlled trial of preoperative high-dose somatostatin analog infusions for gastroenteropancreatic neuroendocrine tumors: preliminary results. The use of somatostatin analogs (SSA) has not been assessed in patients with pancreatic endocrine tumors (PET) or gastroenteropancreatic neuroendocrine tumors (GEP-NETs). In this study, we investigated the efficacy of high-dose intravenous SSA infusions in PET and GEP-NETs. Between September 2012 and July 2013, 30 consecutive patients with biopsy-proven PET and GEP-NETs were enrolled in this randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled trial. Group A patients (18 men, 10 women, median age 59 years) received high-dose SSA (at a dose of 5 mg/day, administered intravenously via an infusion pump for 6 weeks) while Group B patients (10 men, 10 women, median age 65 years) received placebo. The primary outcome measure was the maximum of average
