Star jalsha old serial.[MUSIC PLAYING] [MUSIC PLAYING] NARRATOR: On April 28th, 2017, an asteroid imaged by the NEOWISE mission touched our planet, but its size was too small to be detected. Asteroids as small as one to 10 km can cause devastating damage to the Earth. They can even hit our planet one day. Luckily, NASA's NEOWISE mission possesses the necessary technology and techniques to find asteroids that threaten our existence. Using the all-sky survey, NEOWISE has discovered 70 new near-Earth objects, bringing the total number to over 600. For scientists, discovering NEOs is a big deal. By studying them, we are able to understand the structure, density, and composition of asteroids. The difference is, now we have a tool to survey the asteroid population, thanks to NEOWISE. It's currently the only way we have to know what's around our planet at any time. This is Keith Bale, chief engineer at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, and he is one of the lead scientists of NEOWISE. Keith, let's talk about the NEOWISE mission and what it is designed to achieve.

KEITH BAAL: It came up with the idea that we'd go through the mid-to-far space. We do a lot of the great mission of finding near Earth asteroids. We found things like this one where the space telescope was trying to fit inside. So you can actually see that this is, with a little bit of coverage, is a suspected asteroid. So we've found over 600 asteroids already. And these are the ones that
